Re: HB 2440

Speaker Toma,

I have vetoed HB 2440.

The Arizona Corporation Commission's (ACC) rate-making authority is defined in statute and bolstered by a significant body of case law that already compels the ACC to consider reliability and affordability in decision-making. HB 2440 is unnecessary and creates regulatory uncertainty in instances where affordability and reliability may be at odds.

Arizona's families are facing increased energy costs, disproportionately impacting the most vulnerable in our communities. My administration is working toward solutions that put dollars back in Arizonans' pockets, like rebate programs that provide vital support for families at risk of being unable to pay utility bills, while incentivizing energy-efficient home improvements that lower those bills from the outset.

I urge the Legislature to work with me on finding solutions that deliver direct assistance to Arizona families struggling with energy costs.

Sincerely,
